British victories over our European partners

By John Taylor QC

No National Pride Please, We're British!

Cometh the hour, cometh the man.

In a climate of increasingly apologetic Britishness, one man dares to stand up against a tide of political correctness and boldly ask: 'Are there any good reasons left to 'Fly the Flag'?

Moreover, what is the difference between pride and nationalism and why are our school children no longer taught it?

Can a Briton be a patriot or nationalist without being a racist in a 'multi-cultural' society?

What is the outcome of the deliberate erosion of British character and identity as we know them?

Through the medium of the Brits at war, former QC John Taylor uses history to explore these and many other pertinent questions in his new book 'Flying The Flag'. Are we lost as a nation or is there hope for us? Find out. Join the debate.

The ideal book for Christmas, birthday and of course, St George's Day.
